TEACHER, 59, IS STUDENT.

Path of Four Children Earning His Way at University.

Eugene, Ore., Oct. 15.—The oldest student to register this year at the University of Oregon is George M. Cole, aged fifty-eight years, and the father of four children. Cole is a self-educated man, who had never gone to school more than two months at a time until he entered the State Normal School at Monmouth last fall. He has been a public school teacher for the past thirty years. During the early years of his life he studied enough to successfully pass the Oregon teachers' examination. Cole is registered in the English department. He is "backing" while attending the university and is earning a part of his way. While the father is enlarging his education here, the children are living on his ranch at Husum, Wash.

Not the Right Note.

WOMEN DO NOT FEAR BULLETS

Allies Fed in the Trenches and Wounded Cared for by Peasant Women.

ASKED TO KILL KAISER

Soldier Promised Daughter by Woman If German Emperor Slain—Sailor Tells of Battle at Sea.

London, Oct. 15.—The women of France, more especially the peasants, are little afraid of bullets, and are visiting the trenches of the allies nightly, carrying food to the soldiers and helping to care for the wounded, according to letters arriving here from the front. Some of them follow:

"The French women seem to think that the best cure for a chrapagne or bullet wound was a bottle of wine and a raw egg. On the Wednesday night the women brought hot potatoes and new bread right into the trenches and firing line. I can assure you they are the bravest women I have ever met." Rifleman Cedric Plancher.

Prize for Killing Kaiser.

"A woman said laughingly to me: 'If you kill the Kaiser you shall have my daughter.' I replied that I could not do that right, and she could have a hair of his mustache." Private R. Coombe. "I singling could wipe the Germans out they would all be dead by now."—F. Hannison, R. A. M. C.

"I have had the narrowest escape of my life. The horse I was riding got knocked out altogether by a shell, and while I was getting another one to put in its place a shell came and put three of us out of action. I managed to scramble out of it for about two miles, when I dropped unconscious, and the next place I found myself in was a French hospital with enough bandages around my head to make a girl a dress. You ought to see the sight of a battlefield: it is just like the Crystal Palace on a firework day but for the horses and men dropping. Driver T. Tyler, R. F. A.

Several German Ships Sunk.

"Just these few lines to let you know that I am quite safe after our battle with the Germans. It seems an ordinary day occurrence to have been shot and dropping all around you. We have just sunk several of the German destroyers and cruisers. This ship sank two—a destroyer and a cruiser. The destroyer was sunk with a gun-fire, but we torpedoed the cruiser. Just as we were finishing the engagement five of our battle cruisers came up and signaled to us to get out of the way. They put me in mind of five big policemen telling a crowd of boys to go away after giving a crowd of boys and me a good talking."—Fred Lock, H. M. S. Lydiard, to his mother, at East Molesey.

"We saw one of the German cruisers practically blown out of the water. I saw one funnel and one mast shot away by our light cruiser squadron. While their ship, the Mainz, was sinking, our commander went alongside to save as many as he could. We were twenty yards from her when she keeled over onto her port side and sank. My word, it was close enough."—Leading Telegraphist E. Hobbs, H. M. S. Lurcher.

First-class stoker Barclay Roberts sends the following laconic message to his brother: "We met the Germans yesterday and they didn't get the chance to run away. We met with great success. For more details, see the daily papers."

TWIN GIRLS WED BROTHERS.

All Four of Them Courted in the Same Room.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 15.—A unique wedding ceremony took place at the residence of Rev. O. U. Marple when brothers were united to twin sisters.

The principals were Misses Mayme and Beattie C. Crawford, daughters of Mrs. Grace Crawford, and Messrs. William R. and Albert R. Sweeney, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sweeney. Although the brothers are not twins they have been inseparable companions, and they met the twins together and always called together at the Crawford home, courting the girls in the same room. They proposed on the same night. It is said the meeting was a case of love at first sight for all four.

Some Drivers.

Would-be Purchaser—Do you think this is the horse for a lady to drive? Dealer (after a moment's hesitation)—Well, I must say I shouldn't really want to be the husband of the woman who could drive that horse—Boston Transcript.

GERMANS RESIST ALLIES ADVANCE

Wounded from French Battles Give Enemies Credit for Bravery.

ZOUAVES COURAGEOUS

Cuirassier's Breastplate Saved His Life, He Says, in Driving Back Party of Uhlans.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.

Beauvais, Oct. 15.—One cannot travel anywhere west of the great fighting line without coming across fugitives at every step, or signs of the battle.

"I was at Nanteuil," says one with his arm in a sling. "I was still fighting yesterday and the Germans were falling back. We heard that the English had driven them across the Marne. We were on our side for forty-eight hours under artillery fire. We were chafing to get at the Germans, but our officers would not let us. Our time had not yet come. It was only when the enemy came within 500 yards that we were allowed to fire. We made a dash for them after a few volleys and drove them back, keeping under cover. But we could not go far. The enemy's batteries and machine guns were always ready to pour a murderous fire on our direction. In two days we had gained only a mile and a half."

200 Left Out of 1,000.

"Stand back," the ambulance men shout to us, and a Zouave, with his red Algerian cap and baggy trousers, is lifted out of a train. He is very dangerously wounded, and seems hardly conscious of what is happening around him. The men lift him gently and carry him on their arms and shoulders to the motorcar.

Another man, only slightly wounded, steps out after him. "The battalion belongs to," says the man, "was the hardest hit of all. They fought with the bravery of lions at Oureq. Out of 1,000 men only 200 were left."

From another car I see a young cuirassier step out with his left arm in a sling and clutching his heavy steel cuirass under his right. We ask to relieve him of the heavy metal plate, but he clings to it stubbornly.

"His face brightens up as he tells us his story. He was up at the front during the day of the declaration of war. Three days later we were up at Liege and since that day we have been hardy out of the saddle. I was at Namur, at Charleroi, at Mons, at Saint-Quentin and at Meaux. I think it was somewhere near Chateau-Thierry that I got out of touch with half a dozen of my comrades and the rest of the peloton.

Breastplates Saved Him.

"We were driving back a detachment of Uhlans when I found myself facing half a dozen of them. They were aiming at me carefully and their bullets grazed my ears.

"One Uhlman particularly, on whom I had my eye, took aim at me at least ten seconds. I ducked down and the bullet hit my horse in the head without killing him. The next minute the poor beast got another bullet in the head, but still he carried me. What a fine animal it was."

"I aimed twice, and as I fired I saw two of the Uhlans fall. The rest were turning, when about a dozen infantry crept up from a bank. That was too much. I turned round to find my comrades, when a shell burst alongside me and one of the shrapnel hit my breastplate. It glanced off and got embedded in my arm. A few minutes later I got back to my quarters and was ordered away with the first batch of wounded."

GERMAN LINES IN NORTH ARE SEVERED

extends from Arras, through Arras, to Ypres.

Fifteen miles west of the line lies Hazlebroeck, and twenty miles behind it is Cassel, where the Germans for a week, by furious cavalry charges, have been trying to smash the allied lines.

The occupation of the new French and British positions shows that the Germans have been driven back just this distance to the northward, and that the allies are now in a position to launch a battle to the Antwerp beleaguering army which is moving to the westward.

100,000 Germans at Ghent.

Northeast of this position the Germans have made a corresponding advance, which is part of the converging movement upon Ostend.

The army from Antwerp not only has occupied Bruges, only fifteen miles from Ostend on the east, but has established a line swinging in an arc to the south and then to the west with the vanguard of the German army occupying Thourout and Dixmude, the latter only ten miles from the coast to the southwest.

Ostend, in Thiel, fifteen miles south-east of Bruges, a large force of Germans has appeared and at least 100,000 of the invaders are reported to have occupied Ghent.

It is these two forces in great strength but lacking the elaborate fortifications and fortifications that make the battle of the Aisne as one of the most stubborn struggles in the history of war, that are reported to have come in contact near the Belgian border in a tactical encounter of vast proportions which will decide the fate of the German plan to advance against the French channel ports.

French Report Progress.

On the left bank of the Lys the Germans have been forced to abandon all their positions according to official announcement from Bordeaux, and in the vicinity of Lens and between Arras and Albert the French have made considerable progress. The continued advance of the allies in this direction indicates that the German offensive here has been definitely checked. An index of the severity of the engagements fought in the region of Arras is the report published today by the France Du Nord, that between 11,000 and 15,000 Germans were lost when surrounded in the marsh land in the immediate vicinity of Arras.

A telegram from Bordeaux says that the Germans have recommenced the bombardment of the cathedral at Rheims, while official dispatches record the capture of the German trenches north of Rheims by the allies. Tonight's bulletin says that the French have succeeded in advancing about two kilometers to the north and east of Rheims. The French have moved forward toward Craonne, from Berry-au-Bac and north of Frunay in the direction of Belin.

Further successes are claimed by the French war office on the heights of the Meuse and in the Woivre region, particularly to the south of St. Mihiel and near Marbais. Between the Meuse and the Moselle furious attacks by the Germans to the southeast of Verdun were repulsed and the French have been able to advance some distance to the south of the road from Verdun to Metz.

GETTING A START

NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR.

PROCRASTINATION

(Copyright, 1914.)

Don't do today what you can more conveniently do tomorrow, but don't procrastinate.

Most of our duties can be performed today better than tomorrow; and, if we do them today, we shall sleep better tonight and not have to rush tomorrow.

Work, and plenty of it, if it is not too strenuous, seldom injures anybody. Worry is what undermines the mental and physical systems, and the source of worry is often in thinking about what has been left undone.

In the practice of my business-profession I invariably get rid of the difficult tasks at the earliest possible moment, in order to have them off my mind.

Thousands of people, including the young, work harder not doing anything than they would labor if they accomplished each day the duty of that day.

Thinking about doing a thing is often more wearing than doing it. Keep about of your daily duties, and rest after they are done, instead of worrying about doing them.

All procrastinators are not failures, but I never knew a failure who was not a procrastinator.

Procrastination has done more harm, injured more people, than the actual work itself.

You have daily duties, no matter what your position may be; and you have things to do in the future, which need not be done today, and, perhaps, not tomorrow; but, if you have time today to do them, do them, and you will rest better and sleep better. Accomplishing things in advance of requirement stands for success.

Carry this advance action policy into your social as well as into your business life. If you don't feed well, go to the doctor today, not tomorrow. It is easier to prevent illness than it is to cure it. Thousands, yes, millions, of people are suffering from ailments which could have been prevented by a prompt visit to a good physician.

If some dentistry should be done, see your dentist at the earliest opportunity. It will save your nerves, your time, and your money.

If you are convinced that you need life insurance, the earlier you take out a policy, the less it will cost you. If you can save, it is your duty to do so. Don't begin to save tomorrow, next week, next month, or next year. Begin today. The sooner you put money into the bank, the sooner it will draw interest.

This principle applies to everything, including the shoes you wear. If you wait until your feet are aching on the ground, some shoes which could have been repaired will have to be discarded.

If there is any one thing which is particularly appreciated by your employer, it is keeping in advance of your work, and not leaving for tomorrow even those things which can be done tomorrow.

WILL THE FEDS JOIN ORGANIZED RANKS?

Critics Think Two Twelve-club Circuits Would Be a Paying Proposition.

Fandom asks just what would happen in case the Feds and organized baseball got together. Will they keep the three leagues intact, or will they form two twelve-club leagues?

Such a question is one that only the baseball leaders can answer. The baseball critics seem to think that two twelve-club circuits would be far better than three eight-club leagues, but some of the big baseball leaders say that such a plan would not be feasible.

The Federal League circuit would have to be changed somewhat in 1915 if it went into organized baseball. Three major league teams cannot make a profit if housed in one town. At least, not for several years to come. This would mean—in case there is an amalgamation—that the Feds would withdraw their clubs from St. Louis and Chicago, shifting the franchises probably to Cleveland and Detroit.

Kansas City is not a baseball town, and whether the Feds paddle their own canoe next year, or whether they assist in propelling the organized craft, it seems certain that the town will be dropped from the circuit and the franchise shifted to some other city. Indianapolis has been something of a disappointment to the Federal League officials, and it is possible that the franchise will be transferred from that city to Cincinnati next year, whether the Feds are in or out of organized baseball.
